Neoliberal Social Justice

Rawls Unveiled

Nick Cowen, University of Lincoln, UK

'Neoliberal Social Justice is a remarkable book. Nick Cowen shows that John Rawls's normative commitments, if complemented by institutional and market-process economics, actually support classical liberal public policies. This is a unique and extremely valuable achievement.'

Technology and International Relations

The New Frontier in Global Power

Edited by Giampiero Giacomello, Francesco Niccolò Moro and Marco Valigi, University of Bologna, Italy

'The book provides a fresh view on the interdependencies between technology and international relations that could be useful far beyond the traditional domain of political science. It is a must-read for scholars interested in the cross-disciplinary aspects of the subject, including artificial intelligence, drones and critical information infrastructure.'

The Global Rise of the Modern Plug-In Electric Vehicle

Public Policy, Innovation and Strategy

John D. Graham, Indiana University, US

'This book is literally electrifying. John Graham connects all the circuits to deliver an exciting and edifying analysis of the seemingly imminent transformation of our transportation system to electric vehicles. Drawing on his deep expertise in automobile science, safety and politics, Graham shows how technological advances, charismatic leaders, and energy and environmental policies have driven the EV competition among the United States, Europe, Japan, China and others. This detailed and thorough book will ground a serious discussion and spark a provocative debate on the future of our cars and our societies.'

William Shakespeare and 21st-Century Culture, Politics, and Leadership

Bard Bites

Edited by Kristin M.S. Bezio and Anthony Presti Russell, University of Richmond, US

'Timely studies of a timeless author: from #metoo to racial justice to Donald Trump, this brilliant collection, edited by two leading scholars of leadership and literature, highlights the resonances between contemporary political issues and Shakespeare's complex explorations of authority, civic participation, leadership, autocracy—and human identity itself.'

Global Jihadist Terrorism

Terrorist Groups, Zones of Armed Conflict and National Counter-Terrorism Strategies

Edited by Paul Burke, Delft University of Technology, the Netherlands, Doaa' Elnakhala, Carnegie-Middle East Center, Lebanon and Athletic Integrity Unit, Monaco and Seumas Miller, Charles Sturt University, Australia, Delft University of Technology, the Netherlands and the University of Oxford, UK

This insightful book provides a unified repository of information on jihadist terrorism. Offering an integrated treatment of terrorist groups, zones of armed conflict and counter-terrorism responses from liberal democratic states, it presents fresh empirical perspectives on the origins and progression of conflict, and contemporary global measures to combat terrorist activity.

Digital Identity, Virtual Borders and Social Media

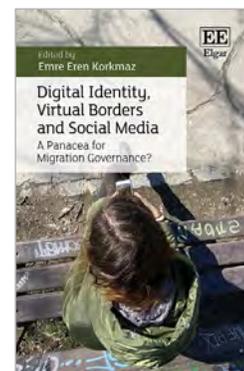

A Panacea for Migration Governance?

Edited by Emre Eren Korkmaz, University of Oxford, UK

'The book is a timely contribution on how digital technology is used in the establishment, management and enforcement of physical and virtual borders. It offers a multi-faceted view into digital technologies used in the context of migration, offering insights into the potential of these technologies, but also exposing the risks, be it through direct use of technology, its problematic conceptualization, or through inequalities in accessing digital resources.'

EU, Turkey and Counter-Terrorism

Fighting the PKK and ISIS

Ethem Ilbiz and Christian Kaunert, University of South Wales, UK

'In EU, Turkey and Counter-Terrorism, Ethem Ilbiz and Christian Kaunert offer an original theoretical and empirical account of the EU's norm diffusion role in the transformation of Turkey's counterterrorism policies. While primarily focusing on formal rule adoption and the PKK and ISIL, the authors go beyond the familiar post-9/11 narratives to untangle the EU impact on the counterterrorism policies in a key membership candidate country. As such, the volume offers innovative insights on both the EU's normative power and the EU's international security actorness.'

Handbook of Cumulative Impact Assessment

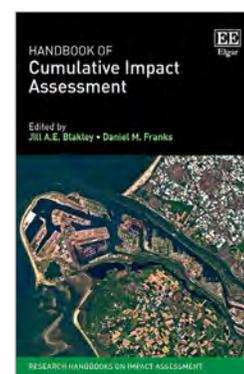

Edited by Jill A.E. Blakley, University of Saskatchewan, Canada and Daniel M. Franks, University of Queensland, Australia

'The consideration of cumulative effects is a critically important and complex aspect of impact assessment. Blakley and Franks have gathered an impressive list of leading experts to offer a broad range of insightful perspectives. Importantly, the book covers both biophysical and social impacts, and deals with cumulative effects at the project, strategic and regional level. It should be on the essential readings list of practitioners, academics and students alike.'

Research Handbooks on Impact Assessment series

Handbook on the Governance and Politics of Migration

Edited by Emma Carmel and Katharina Lenner, University of Bath, UK and Regine Paul, University of Bergen, Norway

'A great line up of contributors provide rich, informative, engaged and engaging analyses of how governance systems play a key role in shaping migration: through their operation and effects, their inclusion and omissions, and the ways in which we understand it as a social and political challenge. It is a testament to the editors and contributors that they have put together such an inspiring collection of essays that expertly synthesise existing debates while setting agendas for future research.'

Constraining Democratic Governance in Southern Europe

From 'Superficial' to 'Coercive' Europeanization

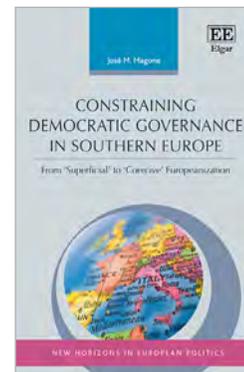

José M. Magone, Berlin School of Economics and Law, Germany

'Especially after the Great Depression of 2008 and later on with the Pandemic, Southern Europe has become an area of high interest again, as in the years of the transitions to democracy during the 1970s. Today, Southern European countries' crucial issue concerns the European Union's relationships, especially from an economic perspective. Professor Magone, a highly renowned expert of the area, addresses it by dissecting those relationships' decisive aspects and revealing the critical features. This book will be compulsory reading not only for scholars and students of the area but also for all those other experts who are interested in internal-external intertwining in semi-peripheral democracies.'

Regional Innovation Impact of Universities

Robert Tijssen, Leiden University, the Netherlands and Stellenbosch University, South Africa, John Edwards, Universidade Nova de Lisboa, Portugal and the Policy Experimentation and Evaluation Platform and Koen Jonkers, European Commission, Brussels, Belgium

'Universities are key innovation actors, progressively acquiring new roles and engaging with their surrounding environments in ways that are increasingly complex. As it becomes more important to understand these roles, it becomes also more difficult to monitor them. This book develops a powerful method to assess the regional impact of universities and illustrates its application. It will become a necessary reference for all scholars and practitioners seeking to understand the multifaceted contributions that universities make to society.'

The Changing Ethos of Human Rights

Edited by Hoda Mahmoudi, University of Maryland, Alison Brysk, University of California, Santa Barbara and Kate Seaman, University of Maryland, US

'This is a foundational book that reveals how the emerging relational approaches to human rights invoke a new morality of care ethics. The essays here are widely disparate yet satisfyingly integrated around the common theme of care. Together they move human rights into a new era, one in which Aristotle's virtue ethics intersects with feminist theory and the new rhetoric of human rights, with the contradictions of Islamic women's rights, and with the use of digitalization to preserve culture rights.'

The Politics of Regional Cooperation and the Impact on the European Union

A Study of Nordic Cooperation and the Visegrad Group

Mats Rickard Braun, Metropolitan University Prague, Czech Republic

'Mats Braun has tackled the subject that many in EU studies and beyond have wanted and needed: how state formations within the EU function and influence its works. A long-time observer, the author is especially well-placed to take on this essential yet understudied topic. This book mobilises an intimate knowledge of both the Nordic and Visegrad countries; a combination difficult to match. The results are an informed, comparative analysis, with great value and insights to a wide range of readers.'

Handbook of Citizenship and Migration

Edited by Marco Giugni, University of Geneva, Switzerland and Maria Grasso, Queen Mary University of London, UK

'Citizenship and migration have been increasingly important topics in academic research as well as in public discourse. This Handbook connects the two phenomena systematically, looking at migration from a citizenship perspective and examining how citizenship has been transformed through migration. It provides an excellent introduction into the state of art with regard to the membership, rights, and participation dimensions of the citizenship and migration nexus.'

A Research Agenda for Evaluation

Edited by Peter Dahler-Larsen, University of Copenhagen, Denmark

'Editor Peter Dahler-Larsen has assembled a worthy multi-faceted volume, A Research Agenda for Evaluation, conveyed through the varied lenses of an exceptional international group of evaluation scholars. These lenses feature philosophical, socio-political, and cultural facets of evaluation. Among the key concepts and values included are the importance of cultural wisdom, overcoming the "bureaucratic capture of evaluation" and the persistent practice of "governing by numbers," the contributions of "collaborative" and "feminist" evaluation traditions, and replacing evaluative "tools of control" with "tools of emancipation."

Teaching Research Methods in Political Science

Edited by Jeffrey L. Bernstein, Eastern Michigan University, US

'This book is a very valuable resource for those teaching research methods in political science – often to students who do not start with any interest in methods. The different chapters provide very useful lessons for educators to effectively teach the "how" and "why" of research methods effectively to our students.'

Populism and Corruption

The Other Side of the Coin

Edited by Jonathan Mendilow, Rider University, US and Eric Phélippeau, Paris Nanterre University, France

'Populist parties claim that political elites are corrupt. This book argues that they are too. Based on the systematic study of a large range of cases, grounded in a common theoretical frame, it exposes the five main types of corruption these parties practice. A brilliant demonstration, and a major contribution to the understanding of populism.'

Justice and Democracy

A Progressive Agenda for the Twenty-First Century

Mike Berry, RMIT University, Australia

'A thorough reappraisal of the strained relationship between justice and democracy has never been more important than in our current global context of the Great Unsettling. Mike Berry not only offers a penetrating historical analysis of this relationship, but also provides a thoughtful roadmap to social justice based on the necessary restructuring of global capitalism. Rejecting both neoliberal market globalism and the populist retreat to economic nationalism, this book calls instead for a reglobalization of the enduring social democratic principles of equality, solidarity, and anti-authoritarianism. A must-read!'

The Future of the Policy Sciences

Edited by Anis Ben Brik and Leslie A. Pal, Hamad Bin Khalifa University, Doha, Qatar

'The Future of the Policy Sciences provides a comprehensive overview of the past development and new trends of policy sciences. Particularly, new technologies, such as big data and artificial intelligence, and global disasters, such as the Ebola and COVID-19 pandemics, have fundamentally changed the ecology of policy decision making all over the world. In the framework of digital governance and global governance, we must reconsider the foundation of policy science theories. Anyone interested in future public policy issues must read this sharp, timely, brilliant book.'
