A Research Agenda for Environmental Geopolitics

Edited by Shannon O'Lear, University of Kansas, US

'A Research Agenda for Environmental Geopolitics lays bare our assumptions about what we mean by environment and by geopolitics. O'Lear and her contributors give us the tools to make explicit the impacts of power, actors, and interests in shaping place-based decision-making and policy (in)action.'

Geographies of Cosmopolitanism

Barney Warf, University of Kansas, US

'Truly an insightful pathbreaking tour de force on an evolving concept related to cultures, politics and economies in the contemporary world. It is a world where empathy, generosity, diversity and understanding are central and the meanings of boundaries, nationalism, identity, territory and distance are contested. Cosmopolitanism as a transdisciplinary theme intersects the social sciences and humanities and merits more research and classroom instruction at all levels.'

– Stanley D. Brunn, University of Kentucky, US

EU Cohesion Policy and Spatial Governance

Territorial, Social and Economic Challenges

Edited by Daniel Rauhut, University of Eastern Finland, Finland, Franziska Sielker, University of Cambridge, UK and Alois Humer, University of Vienna, Austria

"The course of true love never did run smooth," Shakespeare would say about EU Cohesion Policy, one which Europe both underestimates and depends excessively upon. This volume explores the reasons behind this complex phenomenon, by weaving planning and regional perspectives in order to convert problems into solutions. A worthwhile read!"

Ordinary Cities, Extraordinary Geographies

People, Place and Space

Edited by John R. Bryson, University of Birmingham, UK, Ronald V. Kalafsky, University of Tennessee and Vida Vanchan, The State University of New York, SUNY, US

'Ordinary Cities, Extraordinary Geographies is a call for a more inclusive research agenda centering overlooked places often perceived as less important because they are not exceptionally large, or wealthy, or confronted by exceptional circumstances. Bryson, Kalafsky, and Vanchan have assembled both a compelling argument for studying ordinary places and a collection of international empirical examples. The result is an illustration of how and why studying ordinary places is essential to building a more inclusive research agenda for geography (and more broadly social science).'

A Modern Guide to the Urban Sharing Economy

Edited by Thomas Sigler and Jonathan Corcoran, The University of Queensland, Australia

'Spanning multiple disciplines and continents, A Modern Guide to the Urban Sharing Economy documents how sharing platforms transform mobility, space and our relationship with things. How platforms are regulated will determine whether "sharing" delivers community, prosperity and sustainability; or exclusion, precarity and hyper-extraction. Regulation requires a map. Here it is.'

Transport in Human Scale Cities

Edited by Miloš N. Mladenović, Aalto University, Tuuli Toivonen, Elias Willberg, University of Helsinki, Finland and Karst T. Geurs, University of Twente, the Netherlands

'Sometimes a book is produced that gets one thinking and acting in different ways, as it allows problems to be examined from an alternative perspective. This is such a book, as it promotes the idea that transport in cities should be examined in terms of how it is experienced – what it is to be a human on the move.'

Living with Pandemics

Places, People and Policy

Edited by John R. Bryson, University of Birmingham, Lauren Andres, University College London, UK, Aksel Ersoy, Delft University of Technology, the Netherlands and Louise Reardon, University of Birmingham, UK

'This book captures a very specific moment in our current lives: the rise of a formidable pandemic, one more aggressive and more global than prior pandemics. It has already killed more people than have some of our major wars. The authors add what is too often left out: how do we prepare for future pandemics. We already know they will come.'

– Saskia Sassen, Columbia University, US

Grand Challenges of Planetary Governance

Global Order in Turbulent Times

Oran R. Young, University of California Santa Barbara, US

'Oran Young, known worldwide for his contributions to thinking about governance, has taken advantage of the isolation imposed by Covid-19 to produce a ground-breaking analysis of the distinctive challenges of the 21st century along with changes in the global order as we move beyond a western-dominated world. The result is essential reading for all those interested in governance. It will also inspire policy analysts looking for fresh perspectives on specific issues.'

– Jian Yang, Shanghai Institutes for International Studies, China

Advanced Introduction to Water Politics

Ken Conca, American University, US

'Advanced Introduction to Water Politics is a masterful and comprehensive tour of the multiple ways in which water is political. Drawing on decades of outstanding research, Conca goes way beyond de rigueur accounts of water as an issue of national security, to explain the everyday politics of water at diverse scales, sectors, and locations. Retrospective and prospective, human and nuanced, this is a volume that anyone interested in the politics of water must read.'

Handbook of Cities and Networks

Edited by Zachary P. Neal, Michigan State University, US and Céline Rozenblat, Université de Lausanne, Switzerland

'If you want to understand cities – the innovation and dynamism they generate and the way they sort and segregate people by class, race and other dimensions – you have to start by understanding that cities are networks. Zachary Neal and Céline Rozenblat have done all of us who care about cities a great service by pulling together the very best and brightest thinkers on cities and networks in this terrific volume.'

– Richard Florida, University of Toronto, US and author of The Rise of the Creative Class and The New Urban Crisis

Advanced Introduction to Marxism and Human Geography

Kevin R. Cox, The Ohio State University, US

'When I tell ordinary people I'm a Marxist Geographer, I often get puzzled looks. Kevin Cox's comprehensive Advanced Introduction to Marxism and Human Geography shows why such a sub-discipline is not only possible but necessary to understanding the political economy of capitalism. He offers a concise and expert overview of Marx's core theories, and shows how they apply to core geographical issues such as urbanization, social difference, and geopolitics. I very much look forward to teaching with this text!'

A Research Agenda for Heritage Planning

Perspectives from Europe

Edited by Eva Stegmeijer, Cultural Heritage Agency of the Netherlands and Loes Veldpaus, Newcastle University, UK

'This edited volume by Stegmeijer and Veldpaus provides a ground-breaking Research Agenda for heritage planning and would be useful not only for practitioners, but also for academics, students and politicians.'

Planned Urban Development

Learning from Town Expansion Schemes in the UK and Europe

Chris Couch, Emeritus Professor of Urban Planning, Liverpool John Moores University and Honorary Research Fellow, University of Liverpool, UK

'Chris Couch provides a detailed overview of the modern history of urban extension schemes in Britain. Discussions of broader trends are combined with in-depth chapters on individual localities, including international comparative case studies in France and the Netherlands. The book contains rich empirical material throughout and is illustrated by original masterplan sketches, recent images and data visualizations. The lessons from Couch's historical analysis will be valuable for planners managing urban expansion and sprawl in a variety of contemporary contexts across the world.'

Handbook on Cities and Complexity

Edited by Juval Portugali, Tel Aviv University, Israel

'This is a fascinating collection of discussions by leading authors, ranging from philosophical perspectives to conceptual frameworks and mathematical models across many disciplines. A unifying theme is the role of human cognition and decision making, addressed via psychology, uncertainty and risk, evolutionary game theory, behavioral economics and more. The book should be a reference to anyone interested in the history of the field and as a source of ideas for the opportunities (and challenges) of treating cities as complex systems in contrast to less holistic approaches to urban planning and policy.'

Trophy Cities

A feminist perspective on new capitals

Dorina Pojani, University of Queensland, Australia

'Pojani provides a highly original critique of planned capital cities through her use of a feminist perspective. She points to both the colonial inheritance that perseveres in post-colonial nations, even as the new capitals are intended to symbolize independence, and to the patriarchal inheritance within the indigenous culture. Well-written and clearly argued, Trophy Cities is a courageous look at how cities intended as trophies of liberation in fact are also instruments of oppression.'

– Susan S. Fainstein, Harvard Graduate School of Design, US; Author, The Just City and Editor, Gender and Planning

Covid-19 and the Hospitality and Tourism Industry

A Research Companion

Edited by Dogan Gursoy, Washington State University, US, Mehmet Sariisik, Sakarya University of Applied Science, Turkey, Robin Nunkoo, University of Mauritius and Erhan Bo an, Adiyaman University, Turkey

'Filled with many great international examples, this book is a timely volume exploring Covid-19 effects on hospitality businesses and communities, crisis management and sustainability practices. This is a very useful book for researchers, practitioners and students of tourism and hospitality to be better equipped in a post pandemic world.'

– Haywantee Ramkissoon, University of Derby, UK

Advanced Introduction to Demography

Wolfgang Lutz, University of Vienna, Austria

'Wolfgang Lutz secured his place among the handful of the world's most influential demographers by decades of pioneering empirical research, theoretical exploration, and institutional leadership. This succinct book is a capstone to his contributions. Lutz envisions multi-dimensional demography (including age, sex and other attributes like education) as the foundation for a theory that integrates demographic metabolism (cohort replacement), the demographic transition, and the demographic dividend. Demographers, social scientists, and policy makers need to read this important book.'

Advanced Introduction to Migration Studies

Ronald Skeldon, University of Sussex, UK and Maastricht University, the Netherlands

'Drawing from different disciplines and guided by a geographical approach, Prof. Skeldon draws on a lifetime of work on internal and international migration to provide a clear and concise introduction to the field of migration without skirting the thorny issues. The book invites students to think critically and delve into different methodologies and scales of analysis to develop their own critical understanding of migration.'
