Advanced Introduction to U.S. Environmental Law

E. Donald Elliott, Yale Law School and George Mason University and Daniel C. Esty, Yale Law School, US

'Don Elliott and Dan Esty, both leading figures in environmental law and policy, promise in the first chapter to explain how environmental law really is made and works, and they deliver on that promise in a thoroughly enjoyable and accessible format. This book is a perfect reference for a new associate assigned to a law firm's environmental law department as well as a great adjunct to a law school course casebook.'

Advanced Introduction to Comparative Legal Methods

Pier Giuseppe Monateri, University of Turin, Italy

'This magisterial study shows a deep understanding of the methods of comparative law which will be useful to veterans in the field and yet accessible to newcomers. Monateri achieves the difficult task of presenting the approaches of each scholar faithfully while weaving them into a synthetic account of the development of comparative law that places each in the intellectual and political context of its day.'

Advanced Introduction to Landmark Criminal Cases

George P. Fletcher, Columbia University School of Law, New York, US

'George Fletcher, America's leading criminal law scholar, also happens to be a gifted storyteller, known for his gripping first-person account of the Bernhard Goetz trial. In his new book, he offers compelling narratives of eleven famous trials – from the trial of Jesus to that of O.J. Simpson – and uses each to bring to life a fundamental problem of criminal justice. Eye-opening and thought-provoking, it is both a great teaching resource and an entertaining read!'

International Arms Control Law and the Prevention of Nuclear Terrorism

Jonathan Herbach, University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands

'Jonathan Herbach has written a masterly account of the place of nuclear security, particularly prevention of nuclear terrorism, in the broader context of nuclear arms control. While focused on international law aspects, this book is invaluable reading for policymakers, diplomats, officials and others interested in nuclear security. It is an essential introduction for newcomers to this subject, and an insightful reference work for experts.'

Law-Making and Legitimacy in International Humanitarian Law

Edited by Heike Krieger, Freie Universität Berlin, Germany with Assistant Editor Jonas Püschmann, Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law, Heidelberg, Germany

'Formally, states, and states alone, make and authoritatively interpret international humanitarian law. But this legalistic maxim hardly reflects the actual process by which IHL emerges and evolves. Law-Making and Legitimacy in International Humanitarian Law brings together general international law and humanitarian law experts to tease loose key aspects of this dynamic and assess their legitimacy. The first work to examine the foundational issue of IHL development critically and comprehensively, it is a must read.'

National Courts and Preliminary References to the Court of Justice

Jasper Krommendijk, Radboud University, the Netherlands

'A very welcome addition to the small but growing literature providing qualitative empirical insight into the practice of a range of national courts in relation to the preliminary reference procedure of EU law, and how those judges perceive the procedure and the role of the Court of Justice. Thoughtfully and carefully written, and based on case-law analysis as well as primary interviews with judges from three national jurisdictions, the book offers a rich and nuanced picture of the facts which influence national judges when deciding whether to refer to Luxembourg, as well as how they respond to the rulings given by the ECJ to the questions they refer.'

Research Handbook on Compliance in International Human Rights Law

Edited by Rainer Grote, Mariela Morales Antoniazzi, Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law, Heidelberg, Germany and Davide Paris, University of Foggia, Italy

'This Research Handbook offers a paradigmatic shift towards understanding compliance through the lenses of social impact. A precise and novel examination of forms of non-compliance and contested international human rights norms leads to a broader analytical framework on processes of transformation. In particular, the compelling comparative review of emerging interactions between the three international human rights courts offers an exceptional account of a dialogical international human rights protection. This book is a guide for future research and a renewed understanding of compliance.'

European Public Procurement

Commentary on Directive 2014/24/EU

Edited by Roberto Caranta, University of Turin, Italy and Albert Sanchez-Graells, University of Bristol, UK

'This Commentary is one of the most valuable additions to the public procurement literature for years. It combines the advantages of a legal commentary of the continental European tradition (comprehensiveness, structure, depth, etc.) with comparative perspectives, cutting-edge research, and the necessary contextualization, to understand the interactions between the Directive and the complex national systems of administrative and public law. The outstanding editors as well as the 36 contributors from 18 European countries deserve much praise for this important book!'

Contract Modifications in EU Procurement Law

Piotr Bogdanowicz, Warsaw University and Clifford Chance, Poland

'Public procurement scholars, with few exceptions, have always been a little scared to address what happens after adjudication, because it seems just an appendix of the core questions related to the procurement procedure. Now, finally, Bogdanowicz's book gives for the first time a complete, analytical and comprehensive account of such issue, of vital importance in real life. The Author combines his skills as lawyer and academic, offering an original approach which will become a point of reference in contemporary debate.'

Research Handbook on Ocean Acidification Law and Policy

Edited by David L. VanderZwaag, Dalhousie University, Canada, Nilüfer Oral, National University of Singapore and United Nations International Law Commission member and Tim Stephens, University of Sydney Law School, Australia

'Like climate change, ocean acidification is caused by rising carbon dioxide emissions. However, unlike the former, its adverse impacts on the marine ecosystems globally, biological diversity, human rights and food security are largely unaddressed. This Research Handbook draws attention to this gap in law and policy; a gap in dire need of closing. The opportunities, the book suggests, lie in regional, national and sub-national responses. The success depends on whether governments rise to this major challenge. In this context, the book is an alarm bell.'

The EU and the Rule of Law in International Economic Relations

An Agenda for an Enhanced Dialogue

Edited by Andrea Biondi, King's College London and 39 Essex Chambers and Giorgia Sanguiolò, King's College London, UK

'The performance of the European Union as a promoter and enforcer of the Rule of Law in international politics is so poor it makes me cry. The only chapter of international law in which the EU shows muscle is international economic law. New developments in this area are what the core of the present book is about and it treats them in a singularly dense and complete way, with an emphasis on the legal structures and procedures featuring in the Union's Common Commercial Policy. What it offers on Achmea, for instance, counts among the best reads about this Pandora's Box I have come across.'

Intellectual Property, Free Trade Agreements and the United Kingdom

The Continuing Influence of European Union Law

Phillip Johnson, Cardiff Law School, UK

'This book examines a subject which is of increasing significance for the IP laws of all countries, which is the impact of FTAs on those laws. This is of particular significance for the UK where European IP rules will be replaced by those in FTAs. Phillip Johnson is the first scholar to consider this subject and his book makes a very important contribution to our understanding of the general subject of IP chapters in FTAs, as well as to the specific subject of the enduring influence in the UK of the EUs IP laws.'

The Law and Economics of WTO Law

A Comparison with EU Competition Law's 'More Economic Approach'

Marios C. Iacovides, University of Oxford, UK and Swedish Competition Authority, Sweden

'In this exacting volume, Marios Iacovides lays out clearly the overlaps and divergences across the key instruments of antitrust and world trade law. He thus provides readers, practitioners and academics alike, with the proper basis to assess the robustness of legislative and judicial solutions in these two contexts, and the consequential cross-fertilization. The writing style makes it accessible to wide readership, without eviscerating the precision of the expression.'

NEW IN PAPERBACKIntersections of Law and Culture at the International Criminal Court

Edited by Julie Fraser and Brianna McGonigle Leyh, Utrecht University, the Netherlands

'This provocative volume on the culture of the ICC comes amid growing awareness that the Court's internal culture shapes its own legal operations as well as the far flung cultures in which it intervenes. Fraser and McGonigle Leyh have assembled an impressively diverse array of contributors to dissect the numerous cultural dimensions of the ICC's work. What they show is that, rather than delivering a universal conception of justice, the ICC's norms and approaches derive from specific (mostly Global North) cultures and intersect in complex – sometimes damaging – ways with different cultural practices and perspectives around the world. This book is essential reading for anyone interested in the culturally specific character of a nominally "global" institution.'

The Insanity Defense*A Philosophical Analysis

Wojciech Załuski, Jagiellonian University, Krakow, Poland

'Wojciech Załuski's work focusing on the insanity defense, one of the classic problems of criminal law, is an excellent demonstration of how to impartially explain the presumptive underpinnings of this field, an approach which is often absent within ordinary approaches to legal argumentation. Digital Platforms and Global Law

Fabio Bassan, Roma Tre University, Italy

Digital Platforms and Global Law focuses on digital platforms and identifies their relevant legal profiles in terms of transnational and international law. It qualifies digital platforms as private legal orders, which exercise the legislative, executive, and (para)jurisdictional power within them. Starting from this assumption, the author studies the relationship between these orders and state, transnational and international orders and concludes that the power of states to impose rules on platforms is different in terms of their external (in relation to other platforms and states) and internal (in their own legal system) action.

Marine Insurance

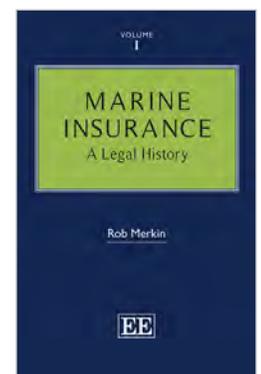

A Legal History

Rob Merkin QC, Reading University, UK; Chinese University of Politics and Law, China; University of Auckland, New Zealand; University of Exeter, UK; and Special Counsel, Duncan Cotterill, New Zealand

'The book provides a history of marine insurance law from 1756-1906 and, in particular, highlights the fascinating influence of war and conflict on the development of insurance law and practice. This is a history of trade and conflict through the prism of law and will be of interest not merely to historians, but also to practitioners who need to understand how and why particular clauses were developed and the contemporary understandings which underpinned the drafting of the Marine Insurance Act 1906.'

Authoritarianism

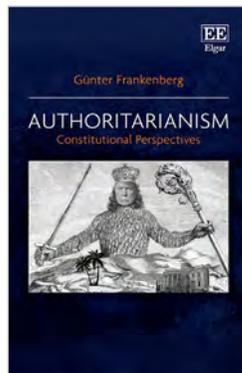

Constitutional Perspectives

Günter Frankenberg, Goethe University, Frankfurt am Main, Germany

'Why do authoritarian regimes bother with a constitution? This book pursues this seeming paradox with deep theoretical insight and broad empirical reach. The result is an indispensable guide to understanding the emerging varieties of authoritarianism and the magical allure that constitutions offer autocrats and democrats alike. This book also holds a mirror back to liberal constitutional regimes illuminating their colonial, ethnocentric, violent and parochial features to which they may have become "comfortably numb."

Climate Change Law

An Introduction

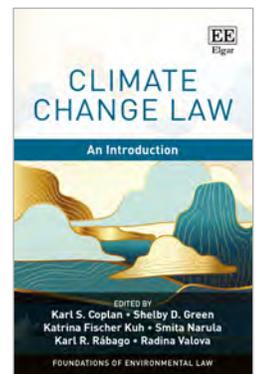

Karl S. Coplan, Shelby D. Green, Katrina Fischer Kuh, Smita Narula, Pace University, US, Karl R. Rábago, Rábago Energy LLC, US and Radina Valova Interstate Renewable Energy Council, US

'It is a challenge to write a textbook on climate change law because the field changes so rapidly. These authors have masterfully pulled together principles that serve as the backbone of the field while integrating recent case law and international agreements. The authors present foundational elements of mitigation, adaptation, energy, and human rights, and then help us recall the importance of private actors and the ethical challenges lawyers must face in this changing world.'

Environmental Norms in Maritime Law

Michael Tsimplis, City University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong (AR), China

'This is an important book, which deals with a key question of our time – whether the norms designed to ensure environmental protection and environmental sustainability of maritime transport are fit for purpose. To answer this question, the author draws on his unique multidisciplinary background and insights as both a Professor of Maritime Law and renowned Oceanographer, who understands the marine environment and its interactions with shipping better than most. . The book is highly recommended for anyone with an interest in maritime law and the environment and makes a genuine contribution to the field.'

Corporations, Accountability and International Criminal Law

Industry and Atrocity

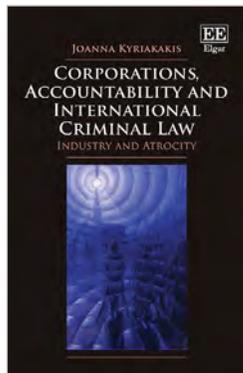

Joanna Kyriakakis, Monash University, Australia

'This work could not have come at a better time. Corporate liability is increasingly explored in international criminal law as an alternative to criminal responsibility of natural persons. The author is an expert on the topic and this work will be a standard work on corporate criminal liability for many years to come.'

– Elies van Sliedregt, University of Leeds, UK

This timely book explores the prospect of prosecuting corporations or individuals within the business world for conduct amounting to international crime. The major debates and ensuing challenges are examined, arguing that corporate accountability under international criminal law is crucial in achieving the objectives of international criminal justice.

EU Collective Labour Law

Edited by Beryl ter Haar, University of Warsaw, Poland and University of Groningen, the Netherlands and Attila Kun, Károli Gáspár University of the Reformed Church in Hungary (KRE) and Hungarian National University of Public Service (NKE), Hungary

'This nuanced interrogation of EU collective labour law reveals a regime in distress. The authors deliver stunning insights into the inherent stresses between EU public policy choices and a collective framework that advances the "human face" of labour rights. Their conclusion that an enhanced EU collective labour law should be an important building block is one that deserves the attention of the EU and its avid watchers.'

– Desirée LeClercq, Cornell University, US

This unique book offers a comprehensive systematization and overview of the EU's emerging 'acquis' and practice of Collective Labour Law. Although the core aspects of Collective Labour Law lie outside the EU's competence to regulate, the laws and industrial relations systems of Member States are undoubtedly influenced by the EU, and the involvement of Social Partners, i.e. representatives of employers and workers, is essential for many aspects of EU law and policy.

Research Handbook on Law and Marxism

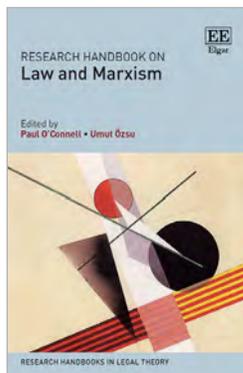

Edited by Paul O'Connell, SOAS University of London, UK and Umut Özsu, Carleton University, Canada

'Paul O'Connell and Umut Özsu have done a great service to all scholars of Marxism. They have assembled a comprehensive volume that includes contributions of both noted experts and brilliant young researchers and that fills a void in the existing literature. The outcome is a wonderful Handbook that is useful for both specialists and readers who approach Marxism and law for the first time. This book will serve as a guide in the field for many years to come.'

The Payment Services Directive II

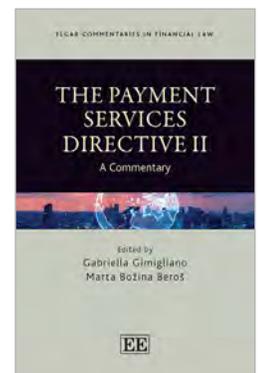

A Commentary

Edited by Gabriella Gimigliano, University of Siena, Italy and Marta Božina Bero, Juraj Dobrila University of Pula, Croatia

This comprehensive and essential Commentary examines both the origins and effect of the EU's 2015 Payment Services Directive (PSD2). Addressing a significant gap in the available literature, the book is divided into two parts: Part I analyses the legislative provisions of the Directive, while Part II explores the PSD2 implementation experience in selected EU member states as well as in the United Kingdom.

EU Market Abuse Regulation

A Commentary on Regulation (EU) No 596/2014

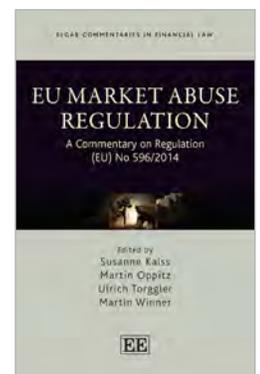

Edited by Susanne Kalss, Vienna University of Economics and Business, Martin Oppitz, a2o legal, Vienna, Ulrich Torggler, University of Vienna and Martin Winner, Vienna University of Economics and Business, Austria

'This book provides an exhaustive analysis of the Market Abuse Regulation, which, despite Brexit, continues to be of core concern to practitioners in this area, for two reasons. First, the Regulation continues as part of domestic UK law as "retained EU law" and, second, its status in relation to EU financial markets remains undisturbed. This book, written by a distinguished group of scholars, lays out, article by article, a complete analysis of the Regulation and its now extensive accompanying pieces of secondary legislation and CJEU decisions. It brings together in a single volume a clear and incisive assessment of all the issues arising, and likely to arise, in the regulation of this notoriously challenging area of market behaviour.'

Recent Trends at the National and EU Level

Edited by Pier Luigi Parcu, European University Institute and Studio Economico, Italy, Giorgio Monti, Tilburg University, the Netherlands and European University Institute, Italy and Marco Botta, European University Institute, Italy and the Max Planck Institute for Innovation and Competition, Germany

'Economic Analysis in EU Competition Policy, edited by Parcu, Monti and Botta, is a timely and stimulating read. It provides a clear view of new approaches, consequences, and difficulties with embracing economic analysis in competition policy. The book offers a cutting-edge insight into these critical topics as needed in a fast-changing world and its digital markets.'

The Impact of the Damages Directive on the Enforcement of EU Competition Law

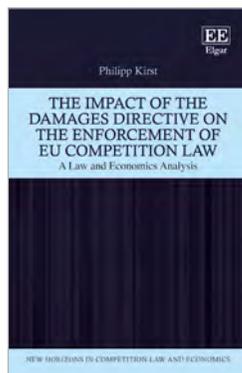

A Law and Economics Analysis

Philipp Kirst, Cleary Gottlieb Steen & Hamilton LLP, Germany and Erasmus University Rotterdam, the Netherlands

'The construction of an effective enforcement regime that compensates the victims of EU competition law infringements continues to present a multifaceted challenge for policy-makers and legislatures. Indeed, despite the adoption of the EU Directive on antitrust damages, how that specific challenge can be overcome in Europe is as of yet unresolved.

Through critical evaluation of the applicable EU law, Philipp Kirst's well-researched and carefully-argued book helpfully scrutinises key aspects of the challenge at issue. It presents numerous perceptive, insightful analyses that, along with the recommendations advanced, deserve to be very closely examined by stakeholders. It is a welcome, important and convincing addition to the literature.'

Financial Advice and Investor Protection

Comparative Law and Practice

Edited by Sandra Booyesen, National University of Singapore, Singapore

'Financial Advice and Investor Protection, edited by Sandra Booyesen of NUS Law Faculty, goes to the heart of law's concern with finance: the investment decision. This excellent book covers every important angle of the investment decision: information provided, duties of advisors, investor skill and status-based regulation, and available remedies. The examination takes place with local expertise in six major jurisdictions, and the regulatory framework is then reevaluated for the challenges of Fintech and increasing automation.'

The Regulation of Tax Competition

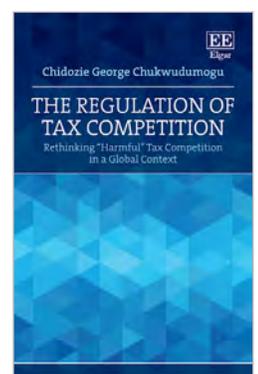

Rethinking "Harmful" Tax Competition in a Global Context

Chidozie George Chukwudumogu, Stellenbosch University, South Africa

'This is an outstanding and timely book. Its core is the proposal to regulate rather than curb tax competition, which is precisely what the new OECD proposals are about. It should be read by anyone interested in the new international tax regime that is emerging from the current OECD framework.'

– Reuven Avi-Yonah, University of Michigan, US

This comprehensive book adopts a nuanced yet straightforward approach to analysing the complex phenomenon of international tax competition. Using the ongoing international efforts of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) and the European Union (EU) as a basis for its analysis, it explores the mixed effects of tax competition and offers an effective approach that takes account of the asymmetrical global context.

After Meaning

The Sovereignty of Forms in International Law

Jean d'Aspremont, Sciences Po School of Law, France and University of Manchester, UK

'If you are the rare kind of jurist on the international scene disposed to engage in introspection so radical that none of your epistemic postulates will be safe, not even your most evident assumptions (that the words of a law-text carry a meaning at once ascertainably present and transmissible, for example), if you think you can withstand the affective cost of such profound intellectual self-transformation, then this title might be your rare kind of book.'

Comparative Law of Obligations

Dário Moura Vicente, University of Lisbon, Portugal

'Comparative research is foundational for the understanding of foreign law and of one's own law, for stimulating legal reform, for harmonizing laws. It may tackle entire legal orders or single issues. Moura Vicente chooses a middle course; in a systematic way he deals with the law of obligations (contracts, torts, restitution) covering a wide range of both common law and civil law systems. His international expertise witnessed by many comparative law publications in Portuguese, is now accessible to a broader community.'

Intellectual Property as a Complex Adaptive System

The role of IP in the Innovation Society

Edited by Anselm Kamperman Sanders and Anke Moerland, Maastricht University, the Netherlands

'Too often, scholars and policymakers view innovation and creative activity as little more than undifferentiated profit motive that can and should be shaped by government regulation. This refreshing volume demonstrates that the world is far more complex, and that policymakers must understand that complexity before designing successful interventions, which may not take the form of traditional regulation. Everyone who is interested in the future of intellectual property policy needs exposure to the insights in this book.'

Posthuman Legalities

New Materialism and Law Beyond the Human

Edited by Anna Grear, Cardiff University, UK, Emille Boulot, Ivan Dario Vargas-Roncancio and Joshua Sterlin, McGill University, Canada

How might law address the multiple crises of meaning intrinsic to global crises of climate, poverty, mass displacements, ecological breakdown, species extinctions and technological developments that increasingly complicate the very notion of 'life' itself? How can law embrace — in other words — the 'posthuman' condition — a condition in which non-human forces such as climate change and Covid-19 signal the impossibility of clinging to the existing imaginaries of Western legal systems and international law?

This carefully curated book addresses these and related questions, bringing 'law beyond the human' (drawing on Indigenous legalities, life ways and ontologies) and New Materialist and Posthuman/ist approaches into stimulating proximity to each other.
