Cultural Policy Beyond the Economy

Work, Value and the Social

Deborah Stevenson, Western Sydney University, Australia

'In a research field dominated by worthy activist polemics, Stevenson offers a cool-headed, clear, and thorough guide to the sociology of a policy struggle. Focussed on the colonisation of art and culture by economics and its reduction to "creative industries", Stevenson's book offers artists, institutions, policy makers and students – everyone in the Art World Complex in fact – an opportunity to grapple with the scale, complexity and values of a much-needed policy change.'

Strategic Community Partnerships, Philanthropy, and Nongovernmental Organization

David J. Maurrasse, Marga Incorporated; Earth Institute and Columbia University, US

'As this volume trenchantly documents, our world faces the ravages of a perfect storm, shedding a glaring light on the disparate impact in our local communities of long-standing systemic racism, continually widening wealth gaps, and a raging global pandemic. Under this spotlight, the urgency and timeliness of strategic, cross-sector sustainable partnerships among organizations anchored in place, undergirded by enlightened philanthropy, and committed to moving the needle on the public good, could not be clearer. By documenting the efforts of ten such partnerships-in-place, spanning localities across the US and the globe, David Maurrasse brings home forceful shared lessons for progress.'

The Elgar Companion to ASEAN

Edited by Jörn Dosch, University of Rostock, Germany and Frederick Kliem, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

'The Elgar Companion to ASEAN is perhaps the most comprehensive and relevant overview of ASEAN available today. The Companion provides a truly elaborate and learned account of almost every aspect of ASEAN that can be considered relevant in determining its shape in the modern era. It looks at issues of theory, identity, institution-building, democracy and governance, civil society, and security and economic development from within ASEAN. From outside of ASEAN, it examines the organization's relationship with the powerful external actors and institutions that influence ASEAN's development and mission. All of the chapters are well-written and argued and display an impressive depth of knowledge and analysis. Overall, this is one of the best and most rewarding overviews of ASEAN that I have encountered.'

Youth Employment Insecurity and Pension Adequacy

Edited by Dirk Hofäcker, University of Duisburg-Essen, Germany and Kati Kuitto, Finnish Centre for Pensions, Finland

'Young people face many immediate challenges in today's labour markets, yet their longer-term prospects for retirement have often been neglected. Importantly, this edited volume addresses the links between disadvantages experienced early in careers and the much later, often substantial, consequences for retirement and old age income. Going beyond the ordinary, these interdisciplinary studies fill knowledge gaps, especially with respect to social risk groups and geographical spread. They investigate how flexibilization of work and pension reforms challenge youth today and how they will continue to challenge them in the future. Are they aware of their prospects – and can they save adequately for their old age retirement?'

TEXTBOOK

Advanced Introduction to Applied Green Criminology

Rob White, University of Tasmania, Australia

'Advanced Introduction to Applied Green Criminology is a valuable synthesis of theoretical and philosophical underpinnings with practical approaches and applications. Distinguished Professor Rob White has expertly combined decades of research into a useful text that collates the diverse attempts to prevent and disrupt environmental crime. Furthermore, he offers insights to both academics and practitioners into other elements to consider when tackling environmental crimes and harms. A must read for anyone working in the field of the environment.'

National Populism and Borders The Politicisation of Cross-border Mobilisations in Europe

Oscar Mazzoleni, University of Lausanne, Switzerland, Cecilia Biancalana, University of Turin, Italy, Andrea Pilotti, University of Lausanne, Laurent Bernhard, University of Lausanne, and University of Zurich, Grégoire Yerly and Lukas Lauener, University of Lausanne, Switzerland

'This book investigates instrumentalisation of borders by national-populist parties from different interdisciplinary perspectives while focusing on a single case study, i.e. Switzerland during the COVID-19 crisis.'

The theoretical approach which distinguishes between borders as issues, narratives and territorial spaces of mobilisation is innovative and should be applied to other contested regions and crises. A must-read for everybody who would like to understand the intricacies of globalised border- and body politics.'

Economics and Power in EU Chemicals Policy and Regulation

Socio-economic Analysis for Managing Risks

Laura Maxim, LISIS (Laboratoire Interdisciplinaire Sciences Innovations Sociétés), UMR 1326/9003 Université Gustave Eiffel, ESIEE Paris, CNRS, INRAE, France

'This book is an eye-opener as to why both TSCA and REACH have failed to protect the public from demonstrated hazards in light of REACH's requirement, and TSCA's inaction, to take alternatives and substitutes into account. It is a failure of both the EU Commission and the EU's regulators that they allowed the existing chemical products industry to control the dialogue about needed changes that the consideration of substitutes would have increasingly encouraged instead. The current activities focused on revising REACH should avoid the mistakes made in reauthorizing TSCA in 2016.'

The Evolution of Information-sharing in EU Counter-terrorism

A Post-2015 Paradigm Shift?

Christine Andreeva, Metropolitan University Prague, Czech Republic

'Christine Andreeva's The Evolution of Information-sharing in EU Counter-terrorism: A Post-2015 Paradigm Shift? makes a timely empirical and theoretical contribution to EU counter-terrorism policy institutionalisation. Drawing upon historical and constructivist institutionalism, this well-researched book explains the institutional changes in EU counter-terrorism by accounting for both structural and cognitive causality. As such, it represents essential reading for anyone interested in the evolution of EU tools and instruments in the fight against terrorism.'

Assessing the Contributions of Higher Education

Knowledge for a Disordered World

Edited by Simon Marginson, University of Oxford, UK, Brendan Cantwell, Michigan State University, US, Daria Platonova and Anna Smolentseva, National Research University Higher School of Economics, Russian Federation

'The authors of this volume should be commended for their important effort to develop a broader and more fruitful dialogue among social scientists and policy-makers about those contributions. Their achievement is also a reminder of the need for more interdisciplinary approaches to understand complex social phenomena.'

Contestation and Polarization in Global Governance

European Responses

Edited by Michelle Egan, American University, US, Kolja Raube, Jan Wouters, KU Leuven, Belgium and Julien Chaisse, City University of Hong Kong and Asian Academy of International Law (AAIL)

'This new and important book offers a comprehensive account of the various forces that are currently at play around the globe and those that have shaped the past century, having produced the international liberal order that is faced with a myriad of pressures. Drawing on a wide range of authors, representing different backgrounds and disciplines, this book offers new insights into the challenges that we are facing today. Focusing in particular on European responses to these pressures in the global economic political order, the authors in this volume provide the reader with in-depth analyses and point to a variety of paths that lie ahead.'

The Transitional Justice Citizen

From Justice Receiver to Justice Seeker

Briony Jones, University of Warwick, UK

'This is an important contribution to an emerging critical studies literature on transitional justice that starts with the deceptively simple premise of looking at the post-conflict context from the inside-out, putting the people themselves at the center of analysis. The power and challenge of this approach is that it asks us to look beyond the usual mental maps and implicit assumptions about what justice is supposed to mean, together with the means by which justice should be brought about.'
