Research Handbook on International Environmental Law

2nd edition

Edited by Malgosia Fitzmaurice, Queen Mary University of London, UK, Marcel Brus and Panos Merkouris, University of Groningen, the Netherlands with Assistant Editor Agnes Rydberg, PhD Candidate, Queen Mary University of London, UK with Assistant Editor Agnes Rydberg

This thoroughly updated and revised second edition of this foundational Handbook combines practical and theoretical analyses to cover a wide array of cutting edge issues in international environmental law (IEL). It provides a comprehensive view of the complexity of IEL, both as a field in its own right, and as part of the wider system of international law.

Ideology

Conservatives, Liberals and Socialists

David Reisman, University of Surrey, UK and Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

This insightful book sheds light on three competing ideological windows on the world: conservatism, liberalism and socialism. David Reisman explores the importance of these perspectives not only to generating public policy, but also in our capacity to explain the very nature of reality.

Rethinking Environmental Security

Simon Dalby, Wilfrid Laurier University, Canada

'This extraordinarily comprehensive book provides an ontological and political reworking of one of the master concepts in International Relations – security – to help us grasp the multiple dangers and anxieties associated with the unsustainable trajectory of global capitalist societies in the Anthropocene. Simultaneously critical and visionary, this unique account pushes us to see environmental security as less about environmental and social protection and more about world making.'

How to do Action Research for Transformations

At a Time of Eco-Social Crisis

Hilary Bradbury, AR+ Action Research Plus Foundation, International

'Hilary Bradbury has made many important contributions to the field of action research over some decades. Yet, I found this book to be her most interesting piece of writing. It is experimental in form and successfully mixes stories of real-world change processes, with auto-biographical reflection and conceptual analysis in a way which really made me think. The book is an erudite and passionate articulation of pathways to action at a time when the world urgently needs to nurture the "proliferating micro worlds" that she describes.'

The Role of the Public Sector
 Economics and Society

Bent Greve, Roskilde University, Denmark
'Recent years have witnessed the "Return of the State" after decades of spreading neo-liberalism and market ideology. Bent Greve's book is a very well written text able to capture the old and new roles of the public sector in contemporary societies. It provides interesting and valuable insights both for scholars and students into how the relationship between the state, the market and society has been evolving and the present and future challenges.'

A Research Agenda for Food Systems

Edited by Colin L. Sage, Independent Research Scholar
'This is a fine and wonderful book. We know that food systems worldwide have been transformed in recent decades. They have made food a raging success, more people fed than ever. They also cause vast ill-health and planetary harm, and leave hundreds of millions of people still hungry. This is a book about the urgent need for redesign and collective action. It brings vital clarity to the right questions, and shows how improvements in social justice can occur.'

The Politics of Resisting Facial Recognition Technology
 Peter Dauvergne, University of British Columbia, Canada

'Facial recognition technologies (FRT) are spreading rapidly worldwide, and have become embedded in numerous everyday government and corporate practices. This widespread adoption has prompted extensive criticism, particularly from civil society groups concerned about human rights abuses and discriminatory impacts for marginalized and vulnerable communities. In Identified, Tracked, and Profiled, Peter Dauvergne provides a much-needed and thoroughly comprehensive overview of the regulatory issues and policy disputes around FRT. This book is essential reading for those interested in political contests over our changing digital landscape.'

Handbook on Strategic Public Management

Edited by Carsten Greve, Copenhagen Business School, Frederiksberg, Denmark and Tamyko Ysa, ESADE Business School, Spain

'Ever since I wrote Creating Public Value, I have had to argue with my academic colleagues about whether the idea of "strategic public management" could be considered a legitimate academic field that should attract attention from researchers, teachers, and practitioners who were interested in developing the concepts and pedagogies that could enable public officials, and more broadly, public leaders, to do better in mobilizing and directing private and public assets towards the achievement of freer, more prosperous, more secure, more tolerant, and more just societies. This Handbook on Strategic Public Management by Carsten Greve and Tamyko Ysa provides a resounding "yes!" to that question, and goes on to explain what this subject is, and – more significantly, why it is important, and how it can be taught! I am very glad it has been written since it shows the breadth of scholarship focused on this idea, along with the depth and precision of the analytic concepts associated with the larger idea. I recommend it heartily to those who wish to understand the internal logic and potential utility of this field, and to develop it further both in theory and in practice.'

Handbook on Critical Political Economy and Public Policy

Edited by Christoph Scherrer, University of Kassel, Germany, Ana Garcia, Institute of the Pontifical Catholic University of Rio de Janeiro and Federal Rural University of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil and Joscha Wullweber, Witten/Herdecke University, Germany

'Critical political economy has done much to debunk mainstream myths surrounding the "efficiency" of the market, the neutrality of the international division of labour, the desirability of "liberalisation", and the implication that there are no alternatives to neoliberalism. Those criticisms are explained clearly in this brilliant volume; but the authors also sketch the contours of democratic and socially responsible forms of production, exchange, and social organisation. This is an indispensable volume for students, scholars, and activists working on global development.'

The Elgar Companion to ASEAN

Edited by Jörn Dosch, University of Rostock, Germany and Frederick Kliem, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

'The Elgar Companion to ASEAN is perhaps the most comprehensive and relevant overview of ASEAN available today. The Companion provides a truly elaborate and learned account of almost every aspect of ASEAN that can be considered relevant in determining its shape in the modern era. It looks at issues of theory, identity, institution-building, democracy and governance, civil society, and security and economic development from within ASEAN. From outside of ASEAN, it examines the organization's relationship with the powerful external actors and institutions that influence ASEAN's development and mission. All of the chapters are well-written and argued and display an impressive depth of knowledge and analysis. Overall, this is one of the best and most rewarding overviews of ASEAN that I have encountered.'

Research Handbook on Public Leadership

Re-imagining Public Leadership in a Post-pandemic Paradigm

Edited by Stephen Brookes, University of Manchester, UK

'The single most important critical success factor I have encountered across policing and public sector service is leadership. This is borne out by the organisations that excel and those which fail. However we lead in a rapidly changing world where public services face multiple and overlapping crises, and leadership must evolve to adapt to this C21st context. The research book, edited by Stephen Brookes, is contemporary in its context and looks forward to what will succeed in the future as well as reflecting upon the lessons of the past. It will energise and provoke the thoughts of the most experienced leader as well as providing a deep well of knowledge for the newest leaders ambitious to do their best to make a positive difference to our society.'

How Central Banks Govern Financial and Climate Tail Risks

John Hogan Morris, University of Nottingham and Hannah Collins, University of Reading, UK

'Morris and Collins' ground-breaking book reveals the dangers of the Bank of England's efforts to govern climate change by calculating tail risks. As market actors find new ways of profiting from these climate tail risks, they warn, it is the most vulnerable populations that will pay the price.'

Religion and Public Administration

An Introduction

Edoardo Ongaro, the Open University, UK and Michele Tantardini, Penn State Harrisburg, US

'This book is a revelation about both the influences of religion on public administration and how the field could be enriched from deeper scholarly attention to religion. I am struck by the breadth of the relevance of religion to public administration. The authors illuminate the relevance of the world's great religions to the field as a whole and to prominent research streams, such as public service motivation. Ongaro and Tantardini offer new perspectives for all public administration scholars to consider and embrace in their research and teaching.'

A Research Agenda for Public Diplomacy

Edited by Eytan Gilboa, Bar-Ilan University, Israel

'A major theoretical contribution to the literature on public diplomacy, a comprehensive and innovative overview of the actors, disciplines, and instruments that continue to shape and advance the field. The volume is a must-read for anyone interested in learning why, what and how the study of public diplomacy needs to advance in order to meet new global challenges.'

A Research Agenda for Basic Income

Malcolm Torry, University of Bath, London School of Economics, Basic Income Earth Network (BIEN) and formerly Citizen's Basic Income Trust. He is a Priest in the Church of England and Priest in Charge of St Mary Abchurch, City of London, UK

'The idea of an unconditional basic income is now discussed all over the world and it raises many questions, sociological and political as well as economic and administrative. Some of them are universal, others are country-specific. In the process of identifying the most important unanswered questions, Malcolm Torry provides a lucid, splendidly informed overview of what we currently know about the many versions of basic income and their likely effects.'

Philanthropy in the Muslim World

Majority and Minority Muslim Communities

Edited by Shariq Siddiqui, Indiana University and David A. Campbell, Binghamton University, US

'With this impressive volume, Siddiqui and Campbell make a much-needed contribution to the understanding of global philanthropy. Philanthropy in the Muslim World includes inspiring contributions from international scholars and thought leaders on an important and understudied topic: How is generosity practiced in Islam, across a wide range of different country contexts?'
