Cultural Policy Beyond the Economy

Work, Value and the Social

Deborah Stevenson, Western Sydney University, Australia

'In a research field dominated by worthy activist polemics, Stevenson offers a cool-headed, clear, and thorough guide to the sociology of a policy struggle. Focussed on the colonisation of art and culture by economics and its reduction to "creative industries", Stevenson's book offers artists, institutions, policy makers and students – everyone in the Art World Complex in fact – an opportunity to grapple with the scale, complexity and values of a much-needed policy change.'

A Modern Guide to the Informal Economy

Colin C. Williams, University of Sheffield, UK

'Peerless and prolific, Professor Colin Williams has again produced an essential guide for anyone wanting a concise yet sophisticated introduction to contemporary issues in the "informal economy". With admirable clarity and precision, Professor Williams deftly explains the magnitude, characteristics and drivers of the informal economy. Nuanced assessments of theoretical and policy choices inform the "roadmap" this text provides to understanding such an integral feature of the global economy. Seasoned scholars and newcomers alike will find value in Professor Williams' latest contribution to this important topic.'

Misinformation in the Digital Age

An American Infodemic

Monica Stephens, Durham University, UK, Jessie P.H. Poon, University at Buffalo, US and Gordon K.S. Tan, Singapore University of Technology and Design, Singapore

'Misinformation in the Digital Age: An American Infodemic has carved out a nice space in a crowded field by bringing an underused lens to the analysis – geography. Their topic is timely, and the theory has legs. This readable book can inform theory building beyond the scope of its contents.'

Handbook on Migration and the Family

Edited by Johanna L. Waters, University College London, UK and Brenda S.A. Yeoh, National University of Singapore, Singapore

'Few things are more central to migration projects than the family, yet rarely in simple ways. This Handbook presents the transnational family in all of its complexity and multiplicity, tracing its diverse meanings over time, across space and generations. Inequalities and power dynamics are deeply woven into family relations, yet migration also generates novel familial arrangements and subjectivities. The rich contributions span a range of geographical contexts and adopt feminist, agency-centred and grounded approaches to crucially overturn long-standing normative assumptions about transnational families. The Handbook will be an essential resource for scholars and practitioners seeking to understand the personal and societal impacts of migration on families, and of families on migration.'

A Research Agenda for Terrorism Studies

Edited by Lara A. Frumkin, Open University, UK, John F. Morrison, Maynooth University, Ireland and Andrew Silke, Cranfield University, UK

'This is a very timely volume that examines the state of terrorism studies as a discipline. It examines a range of pressing issues, including the development of a more cross-sector, interdisciplinary approach to the subject; the ethical issues involved and the need for more gender-based and non-Western perspectives. Highly recommended.'

Handbook of Research Methods in Behavioural Economics

An Interdisciplinary Approach

Edited by Morris Altman, University of Dundee, UK

'Morris Altman succeeds in assembling experts from various scholarly disciplines who present the arsenal of research methods in behavioral economics and their potential in applied social research. This is an excellent comprehensive Handbook that is of interest to students and scholars, committed to understanding economic behavior which is often driven by a-rationality and irrationality rather than the capacity to rationally maximize one's own utility.'

Handbook of Gender and Technology

Environment, Identity, Individual

Edited by Eileen M. Trauth, The Pennsylvania State University and Jeria L. Quesenberry, Carnegie Mellon University, US

'Professors Trauth and Quesenberry pull together the most up-to-date and comprehensive view of gender imbalance in the IT field that I am aware of. This is a timely infusion of what has been learned to date and why interventions to create more balance do and do not work. Given recent discussions in the Information Systems academic community, this should provide a wonderful resource to elevate the conversation from wheel spinning to serious action taking.'

Research Handbook on Intersectionality

Edited by Mary Romero, Arizona State University, US

'Mary Romero has added a vital resource to the copious literature on intersectionality by building on the highlights of path-breaking classic arguments while combining these in each article with the newest applications of the concept to a wide field of concerns. Both established voices and emerging scholars contribute to centering the issues of practical application to research and activism, and including rarely considered topics such as disability, human rights and indigeneity. A timely reference for those new to the field but also a source of inspiration for even the most knowledgeable scholars.'

Systems Thinking in International Education and Development

Unlocking Learning for All?

Edited by Moira V. Faul, Geneva Graduate Institute of International and Development Studies, Switzerland and Laura Savage, University of Cambridge, UK

'Systems thinking has been successfully applied to address service delivery challenges in many sectors, especially health. While it is a relatively new approach in education, systems thinking will become a commonly used tool in delivering quality education post the ravages of covid. This book, consisting of 11 chapters and authored by a wide range of reputable practitioners on the topic, will become a valuable companion to donors, policymakers and implementers down to the classroom level striving to provide quality learning for all children.'

Youth Employment Insecurity and Pension Adequacy

Edited by Dirk Hofäcker, University of Duisburg-Essen, Germany and Kati Kuitto, Finnish Centre for Pensions, Finland

'Young people face many immediate challenges in today's labour markets, yet their longer-term prospects for retirement have often been neglected. Importantly, this edited volume addresses the links between disadvantages experienced early in careers and the much later, often substantial, consequences for retirement and old age income. Going beyond the ordinary, these interdisciplinary studies fill knowledge gaps, especially with respect to social risk groups and geographical spread. They investigate how flexibilization of work and pension reforms challenge youth today and how they will continue to challenge them in the future. Are they aware of their prospects – and can they save adequately for their old age retirement?'

NEW Essentials in Social Policy Collection

We have used citation, sales, and Elgaronline usage data to curate Essentials Collections - titles that have stood the test of time in key areas of our list. Featuring wide ranges of topics and written by geographically and ideologically diverse selections of our authors, these are essential collections for libraries building well-rounded and comprehensive collections.

Elgaronline allows for unlimited simultaneous user access and DRM free chapter downloading so these resources can easily be used in courses. With this collection, your researchers will have access to some of the best writing from across their field

Benefits for Faculty

- Quick and easy access to hundreds of titles in your field – from classic backlist to the latest releases. New titles are added every month.
- Read chapters online, or download a PDF to print or read offline.
- Set up a user account and save your searches, export citations, and bookmark chapters you want to refer back to.
- Easily link directly to chapters in your syllabi and course management system or as part of digital course packets.
