The European Court of Human Rights

Current Challenges in Historical Perspective

Edited by Helmut Philipp Aust, Freie Universität Berlin, Germany and ILA Study Group on 'The Role of Cities in International Law' and Esra Demir-Gürsel, Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin, Germany

'An original, unique and fundamental contribution to the widespread debate on the very idea of an international system for protecting human rights that directly affects the European Court of Human Rights, "the conscience of Europe". In revisiting history from a contemporary perspective, this work provides an outstanding critical analysis of the Court's alarm bell function in the most sensitive areas of human rights. An illuminating book in which the past enlightens the present. A must-read for everyone in the field.'

– Françoise Tulkens, Former Vice-President of the European Court of Human Rights

International Environmental Law

Edited by Donald K. Anton, Australian National University and Griffith University, Australia

This two-volume set contains a representative selection of leading articles by outstanding scholars, practitioners, and policymakers in the field of international environmental law (IEL). Professor Anton has organized the contributions along three major lines; firstly, the papers explore the challenge of transnational environmental problems and the nature of IEL, including fundamental principles and concepts, actors, and compliance and enforcement. Secondly, the development and application of IEL in the context of specific regimes is explored, including atmosphere, oceans, and hazardous substances. Finally, the volumes examine how IEL interacts with other international legal regimes, including international trade and human rights. All the contributions reflect a broad diversity of views and cover the most important key areas currently debated in IEL.

Alongside an original introduction by the editor, this collection is a valuable tool for scholars, researchers, practitioners, and students with an interest in international environmental law.

35 articles, dating from 1978 to 2014

Contributors include: D. Bodansky, J. Brunnée, D. Esty, S. McCaffrey, P.H. Sand, P. Sands, C. Stone, C. Tinker, E. Weiss

The European Restructuring Directive

Gerard McCormack, University of Leeds, UK and University of Vaasa, Finland

'In this excellent new book, Gerard McCormack adopts a contextual approach to the European Restructuring Directive, examining its implementation options against the choices which countries have made in the design of real-world restructuring tools. The book is both an invaluable guide to the principal features of the Directive, full of McCormack's trademark insights, and an invaluable reference on almost every aspect of restructuring law, from theory to the fundamental concepts which determine how a restructuring procedure is constructed.'

Challenges to Assumptions in Competition Law

Edited by David Bosco, Aix-Marseille Université, France and Michal S. Gal, University of Haifa, Israel

'This is an impressive book, featuring contributions from all over the world and organized around a critical, under-examined theme: What assumptions are relied on in competition law analysis, and are they fit for the purpose as applied to globalized and digitalized markets? The reader will find some new voices and fresh thinking, as typically assembled and provoked by ASCOLA, the international academic society of competition law researchers.'

Research Handbook on Law and Emotion

Edited by Susan A. Bandes, DePaul University College of Law, Jody Lyneé Madeira, Indiana University, Kathryn D. Temple, Georgetown University, US and Emily Kidd White, York University, Canada

'It's high time that we appreciate the importance for law of emotions, like anger, disgust or empathy. Should law embrace emotion as inevitable, or discourage it for warping judgments and hampering fairness? The editors have gathered an impressive interdisciplinary range of perspectives on this flourishing field. Their superb collection of contributors reveal the importance of emotion not only in criminal law, but in bankruptcy, evidence, international law and other arenas. The power of emotion matters not only for juries, but for judges, legal educators and legislators. The Research Handbook of Law and Emotion is an innovative and thoughtful contribution that brings order to a complex unruly field.'

Poverty and Human Rights Multidisciplinary Perspectives

Edited by Suzanne Egan, University College Dublin, Ireland and Anna Chadwick, University of Glasgow, UK

'Suzanne Egan and Anna Chadwick have brought together a range of emergent and established voices in this collection on the tensions and contradictions inherent in the roles of human rights in combating poverty. Multidisciplinary contributions explore theoretical and practical perspectives, framing the challenges across economical, political and geographical dimensions. Upon completion, the reader has undoubtedly a more holistic view of the tensions and contradictions encountered by human rights engagement in debates on poverty. Like all good books, it makes you think.'

Energy Law, Climate Change and the Environment

Edited by Martha M. Roggenkamp, Kars J. de Graaf and Ruven C. Fleming, University of Groningen, the Netherlands

'This impressive and ambitious volume could not be more timely. Climate change now firmly links energy and the environment, and the way in which energy law is structured will profoundly influence the effectiveness of policy responses. Written by leading experts from across the world, this is the most comprehensive examination of energy law to date that has been written with climate change and the environment in mind. As such it will be an essential reference work for lawyers and policy makers engaged in these issues.'

Judges, Technology and Artificial Intelligence

The Artificial Judge

Tania Sourdin, University of Newcastle, Australia

'This book focuses on how new information technologies can support judges and lawyers. It explores the extent to which technological developments might replace judges, in at least some aspects of their work. Human justice requires protection of ethical frameworks, litigant vulnerability and sensitivity to diversity. The author is aware of the limits of change. But no practitioner can be complacent about difficulties and costs of access to the law. The author challenges us to think creatively and questioningly about the status quo.'

Advanced Introduction to Legal Reasoning

Larry Alexander, University of San Diego and Emily Sherwin, Cornell University, US

'In an eminently lucid book, Alexander and Sherwin argue that legal reasoning is just not special or distinct. Whether or not one agrees with their claim, no one reading their wonderful and engaging book can escape the conclusion that their reasoning, and their book, is quite special. Perhaps their book could have been called "Advanced Introduction to Reasoning"'

Forming Transnational Dispute Settlement Norms

Soft Law and the Role of UNCITRAL's Regional Centre for Asia and the Pacific

Shahla F. Ali, University of Hong Kong

This thought-provoking book examines whether regional centres associated with global legal institutions facilitate expanded citizen engagement in global soft law making. Through an analysis of empirical research into the role of decentralized soft law making in the East Asian region, it investigates the influence of such regional centres in overcoming representational deficits in the design of cross-border dispute settlement norms.

The International Rule of Law

Scope, Subjects, Requirements

Denise Wohlwend, attorney-at-law, Zurich, Switzerland

'Virtually everyone seems to agree that the rule of law is a good thing, but there is enormous variation in what it means domestically and, in particular, what it might mean internationally. In this important book Denise Wohlwend takes seriously the idea of an international rule of law that is more than just an extension of its domestic counterpart operating to the benefit of states. On the contrary, she argues, it should complement rather than compete with the political and legal aspirations of protecting individuals from unregulated power.'

Regulating the Use of Force in International Law

Stability and Change

Russell Buchan and Nicholas Tsagourias, University of Sheffield, UK

'This is a lively, readable and concise account of the regulation of the use of force, bursting with contemporary examples. The use of force is perhaps the most contentious area of international law, its terms being loaded with presuppositions about law, politics and social relations. The authors present the material clearly for our assessment, while their present voice reminds us that there can be no finite answers to these difficult questions.'

Anti-Money Laundering Regulation and Compliance

Key Problems and Practice Areas

Alexander C. Dill, UCLA School of Law and Anderson School of Management and University of Chicago, US

'Alexander Dill's Anti-Money Laundering Regulation and Compliance provides a uniquely intelligent walk through the AML system that is so often reduced to a complex web of rules: the author approaches his topic from the most challenging end, trying to make sense of that enigmatic risk based approach. . . This book helps, like few others, those working within the financial services industry and outside observers alike to make sense of these heavily criticized AML standards.'

The Euro Crisis and Constitutional Pluralism

Financial Stability but Constitutional Inequality

Tomi Tuominen, University of Lapland, Finland

'Through a painstaking, compelling analysis of case law and legislation, Tuominen rejects constitutional pluralism as a normative theory. To corroborate his claim, he points out that the asymmetrical structure of the Economic and Monetary Union, facilitating challenges against EU law by national courts, is unsustainable. Regardless of one's view on the matter, the book's arguments will have to be taken into account seriously by EU constitutionalists and legal theorists engaged in the debate on the future of Europe.'

The Construction of the Customary Law of Peace

Latin America and the Inter-American Court of Human Rights

Cecilia M. Bailliet, University of Oslo, Norway

This thought-provoking book explores the emerging construction of a customary law of peace in Latin America and the developing jurisprudence of the Inter-American Court of Human Rights. It traces the evolution of peace as both an end and a means: from a negative form, i.e. the absence of violence, to a positive form that encompasses equality, non-discrimination and social justice, including gendered perspectives on peace.

Contract Law

A Comparative Introduction

3rd edition

Jan M. Smits, Maastricht University, the Netherlands

Reflecting the most recent changes in the law, the third edition of this popular textbook provides a fully updated, comparative introduction to the law of contract. Accessible and clear, it is perfectly pitched for international students and courses with a global outlook. Jan Smits' unique approach treats contract law as a discipline that can be studied on the basis of common principles and methods without being tied to a particular jurisdiction or legal culture. Notable updates include the consequences of Brexit, the implementation of new European directives 1999/770 and 2019/771 as well as coverage of the effect of COVID-19 on contracts.

Law's Reality

A Philosophy of Law

Allan Beever, Auckland University of Technology, New Zealand

'This book is a sustained and penetrating application of the linguistic and social philosophy of John Searle to legal theory. Convincingly affirming the insufficiently explored interest of Searle's work in this regard, questions, including the question What is Law?, are posed at a fundamental level, and highly interestingly answered. One initially will hesitate about a work of this ambition, but Beever's previous critique of the foundations of obligations and of legal reason has allowed him to entertain, and in considerable measure satisfy, such ambition. This could be a path-breaking book.'

Legal Fictions in International Law

Reece Lewis, Cardiff University, UK

'The topic of legal fictions is making a much-deserved comeback, following Jeremy Bentham's scornful critique of them in English common law. In this cautiously enthusiastic defence, Reece Lewis identifies, taxonomises and evaluates the presence of fictions in international law. The result is a treat for international lawyers and legal theorists alike.'

International Commercial Arbitration

A Comparative Introduction

Franco Ferrari, New York University, New York, US, Friedrich Rosenfeld, Hanefeld, Germany and NYU Paris, France, with Consultant Editor John Fellas, New York University, New York, US

'This work is probably one of the most readable and comprehensive texts on international arbitration that I have personally come across. Its coverage is wide-ranging and yet organised in a simple logical manner. The authors have done a marvellous task in distilling complex judicial decisions into bite-size learning points.'

I commend this work to all students and any practitioner eager to get a strong grasp of the subject before entering the international arbitration arena.'

Alternative Development Finance and Parallel Development Strategies in the Asia-Pacific

Racing for Development Hegemony?

Jin Sheng, The University of Hong Kong

This insightful book examines the impact of two competing visions of Asian-Pacific economic growth paths and development governance. It discusses law, development and finance in the context of the Indo-Pacific Strategy versus the Belt and Road Initiative (BRI), whilst also comparing parallel development financing systems.

Internships, Employability and the Search for Decent Work Experience

Edited by Andrew Stewart, Rosemary Owens, University of Adelaide, Australia, Niall O'Higgins, International Labour Organisation, Switzerland and University of Salerno, Italy and Anne Hewitt, University of Adelaide, Australia

'Internships, Employability and the Search for Decent Work Experience is a compelling and state-of-the-art look at the global internship phenomenon. A truly international group of scholars probe the topic from nearly every angle, in what amounts to a careful but thorough demonstration that legally, economically, socially, and otherwise all is not right with the world of internships.'
