A Research Agenda for Sustainable Tourism

Elgar Research Agendas

Edited by Stephen F. McCool, Professor Emeritus, Department of Society and Conservation and Keith Bosak, Professor of Nature-based Tourism and Recreation, Department of Society and Conservation, University of Montana, US

Exploring tourism in an increasingly valuable landscape, this forward-looking book examines the importance of the sustainability of global travel. Leading authors in the field outline the major trajectories for research helpful in developing a sustainable and environmentally-minded industry.

‘The book is a wonderful compilation of literature containing chapters that identify information challenges, research gaps, questions and possible opportunities for sustainable tourism along with topics that are applicable across different contexts (social, political or geographical) allowing a better understanding of the functionality and management of tourism-related systems in the face of change. In general, it will be a good resource for students and scholars working in the fields of tourism geography, environmental studies and policy and tourism management and hospitality.’

– Nitasha Sharma, International Journal of Tourism Policy
