Europe, China, and the Limits of Normative Power

New Horizons in European Politics series

Zsuzsa Anna Ferenczy, Affiliated Scholar, Department of Political Science, Vrije Universiteit Brussel, Consultant on China and the Korean Peninsula, Human Rights Without Frontiers

Europe, China, and the Limits of Normative Power is a groundbreaking book, offering insights into European influence regarding China's development, during a period when Europe confronts its most serious political, social, and economic crises of the post-war period. Considering Europe’s identity and its future international relevance, this book examines the extent to which Europe’s multi-layered governance structure, the normative divergence overshadowing EU–China relations and Europe’s crises continue to shape – and often limit – Europe’s capacity to inspire China’s development.

‘This very readable book should attract a broad readership as it will be essential reading for academics and experts working on EU-China relations as well as the general public seeking a better understanding of the interaction between two of the foremost global actors in international relations.’
– Fraser Cameron, EU-Asia Centre

‘This is a thoroughly researched book, a unique and important contribution to the debate about the EU–China relations and the effectiveness of normative power more broadly. It is relevant to both practitioners and scholars.’
– Jonathan Holslag, Vrije Universiteit Brussel, Belgium

2019 192 pp Hardback 978 1 78897 581 0 £79.00 £71.10 US$120.00 US$108.00

Elgaronline 978 1 78897 582 7