Asia-Pacific Geopolitics
Hegemony vs Human Security

Edited by Joseph A. Camilleri, Emeritus Professor, La Trobe University, Melbourne, Australia, Larry Marshall, Associate Lecturer and Project Officer for Australian Studies, Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, La Trobe University, Melbourne, Michalis S. Michael, Director, Centre for Dialogue-Global Reconciliation, Australia and Michael T. Seigel, Institute for Social Ethics, Nanzan University, Nagoya, Japan

This book is a probing reassessment of security prospects for the Asia-Pacific region centred on an analysis of three key notions: hegemonic power, human security and multilateralism.

‘Geopolitical contestation in the Asia-Pacific will be one of the defining features of the wider international order in the twenty-first century. This well-conceived volume brings together a team of leading scholars from around the region to help us understand why and what it may mean. It could hardly be more timely or useful.’
– Mark Beeson, University of York, UK

‘... a very timely and valuable set of essays by expert contributors dealing with some of the most crucial issues of our time. The essays are bound to stimulate more informed debate on the complex dynamics of the Asia-Pacific region and the challenges and dilemmas of the first decade of the twenty-first century.’
– Stephanie Lawson, University of East Anglia, UK

‘Are Japan and Australia part of Asia? Can middle powers and/or the United Nations play a constructive role independent of the dominance of a hegemonic power? The authors of this stimulating collection on the geopolitics of the Asia-Pacific astutely weigh the possibilities for the emergence of an Asian community as an alternative to dependence by middle powers and the UN on the United States in a period of hegemonic decline in the wake of 9/11.’
– Mark Selden, Cornell University, US

2007 264 pp Hardback 978 1 84720 098 3 £95.00 £85.50 $138.00 $124.20
Elgaronline 978 1 78254 262 9

Edward Elgar Publishing Ltd. is registered in the UK at: The Lypiatts, 15 Lansdown Road, Cheltenham, Glos GL50 2JA. Registered number: 2041703

www.elgaronline.com