The Neoliberal Revolution in Eastern Europe
Economic Ideas in the Transition from Communism
New Thinking in Political Economy series
Paul Dragos Aligica, Senior Research Fellow, F. A. Hayek Program for Advanced Study in Philosophy, Politics, and Economics, George Mason University, US and Anthony J. Evans, Assistant Professor of Economics, ESCP-EAP European School of Management, UK

This unique book develops two different but related research agendas: the study of the spread of ‘neoliberalism’ – as seen from the perspective of Eastern European post-communist evolutions; and the study of Eastern European transition – as seen from an ideas-centred perspective. It challenges a series of misunderstandings and myths about the spread of neoliberal economic ideas in Eastern Europe and offers a clearer understanding of progress since market reform began.
