Research Handbook on UN Sanctions and International Law

Since the end of the Cold War we have witnessed an unprecedented intensification of the use of sanctions by the UN Security Council. This study of the current practice of UN sanctions in international law includes the different types of UN sanctions regimes, notably counter-terrorism regimes, counter-proliferation regimes and conflict-resolution regimes. It covers their interrelationship with other regimes and substantive areas of law, as well as issues arising from their implementation and application at the domestic level.

'Taking stock of 25 years of UN sanctions, this Research Handbook offers new perspectives on one of international law's "evergreen" topics. Whereas much of the literature on sanctions is too fine-grained and technical, this Research Handbook combines detailed assessments of particular sanctions regimes with a high-level analysis of the main developments in UN practice. A very welcome addition to the Elgar Research Handbook series!'
– Christian J. Tams, University of Glasgow, UK

'The Research Handbook merits commendation for its thorough analysis of a phenomenon that is still an object of controversy and contrasting evaluations.'
– Natalino Ronzitti, Italian Yearbook of International Law
