Handbook on the Changing Geographies of the State

New Spaces of Geopolitics

Edited by Sami Moisio, Professor of Spatial Planning and Policy, Department of Geosciences and Geography, University of Helsinki, Finland, Natalie Koch, Associate Professor of Geography, Department of Geography, Syracuse University, US, Andrew E.G. Jonas, Professor of Human Geography, Department of Geography, Geology and Environment, University of Hull, UK, Christopher Lizotte, Post-Doctoral Scholar, Department of Geosciences and Geography, University of Helsinki and Juho Luukkonen, University lecturer in Geography, Department of Geography and Geosciences, University of Helsinki, Finland

This authoritative Handbook presents a comprehensive analysis of the spatial transformation of the state; a pivotal process of globalization. It explores the state as an ongoing project that is always changing, illuminating the new spaces of geopolitics that arise from these political, social, cultural, and environmental negotiations.

'This Handbook introduces readers to key ideas and issues related to geography and state power in the twenty-first century. A compelling collection, it investigates the production and transformation of the state, focusing on the spatial practices and expressions of political power over time. The volume brings together an extraordinary group of contributors, presenting researchers and students with a rich compendium of expert knowledge on the state as a form of social and political organization that remains vital to understand and interrogate in these turbulent times.'

- Katharyne Mitchell, University of California, Santa Cruz, US