Research Handbook on the Law and Politics of Migration

Research Handbooks in Law and Politics

Edited by Catherine Dauvergne, Vice-President Academic and Provost, Simon Fraser University and formerly Dean and Professor of Law, University of British Columbia, Canada

As the law and politics of migration become increasingly intertwined, this thought-provoking Research Handbook addresses the challenge of analysing their growing relationship. Discussing the evolving theoretical approaches to migration, it explores the growing attention given to the legal frameworks for migration and the expansion of regulation, as migration moves to the centre of the political global agenda. The Research Handbook demonstrates that the overlap between law and politics puts the rule of law at risk in matters of migration.

“This Research Handbook is both timely and timeless – offering penetrating insight into contemporary developments in subjects as diverse as technology and migration, or the impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, while also offering fresh insights into persistent normative and conceptual debates in the field. It is bound to become a field-defining collection.”
– Audrey Macklin, University of Toronto, Canada

“Dauvergne’s elegant volume is a tour de force of the inseparability of migration law and politics. The weaknesses of existing migration frameworks are exposed at a time when the human desire to move has never been so universally shared nor so comprehensively thwarted. From impenetrable webs of repulsion and management to medico-legal borders in the time of a pandemic, this Research Handbook pushes us to question what the migration frameworks of tomorrow need to look like and all of the legal, political and institutional challenges they will bring. Brava.”
– Sharon Pickering, Monash University, Australia

“This Research Handbook is a must-have for anyone seeking to truly understand the relationship between law, politics, and migration. It represents a unique collaboration among an interdisciplinary, transnational collection of pre-eminent scholars who apply their expertise to the most significant migration questions of the modern world. Its contribution lies in illuminating how migration issues have moved from the borders of our society to the center of law and politics on a scale that is at once global, intensely local, and ultimately personal.”
– Juliet Stumpf, Lewis and Clark Law School, US

“With breadth and depth, this superb volume offers new perspectives on migration theory and current policy debates. Starting from the premise that law both shapes and is shaped by politics, the chapters adopt interdisciplinary and critical approaches in addressing a remarkably wide range of topics, including asylum and refugee policy, border practices, the Global Compact on Migration, COVID-19 and temporary workers. Important attention is paid to methodological issues as well as the role of civil society organizations, the media and technology in influencing immigration policy.”
