Research Handbook on Trade Wars

Edited by Ka Zeng, University of Arkansas and Wei Liang, Middlebury Institute of International Studies at Monterey, US

The Research Handbook on Trade Wars presents an informative and in-depth account of the origins, dynamics, and implications of trade wars, which are growing both in scale and scope in today’s increasingly interdependent global economy. Providing the frameworks necessary for understanding the political and economic logics of trade wars, this Handbook will be a valuable source of reference for researchers, government officials, businesses, and postgraduate students interested in international political economy, international economics, economic statecraft, public policy, and international relations.

‘The chapters in this impressive Research Handbook range from deeper dives into particular trade spats to higher-altitude analyses of their causes and consequences. Scholars especially interested in the US-China trade war will find a wealth of content. Instructors will find much connecting current events with course material about international political economy.’
– Stephen Chaudoin, Harvard University, US

‘This is the most comprehensive study of trade wars, their causes, as well as their consequences. The questions raised in this book should be valuable input to academics and practitioners alike who are concerned by today’s increasingly uncertain environment.’
– Petros C. Mavroidis, Columbia Law School, US
