The Economic Development of Northeast Asia

Edited by Heather Smith, Fellow, Division of Economics, Research School of Pacific and Asian Studies and Asia Pacific School of Economics and Management, Australian National University, Australia

Economic growth in Northeast Asia during the last 50 years has, by any standards, been remarkable. This major four-volume set draws together some of the most influential papers published on the growth and industrial transformation of the economies of Japan, Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong.

‘This is a real doorstep of a collection. The four volumes contain over 70 reprinted articles and chapters of books, many of them individually of the first importance... new libraries lacking good runs of journals may well find the collection attractive.’
