THE PSYCHOLOGY OF GENDER

The International Library of Critical Writings in Psychology series

Edited by Carol Nagy Jacklin, Professor of Psychology, University of Southern California, Los Angeles, US

This major four volume work provides a comprehensive and authoritative selection of the most important articles and papers in psychology and the behavioural sciences, central to gender studies. Each volume is deliberately designed to offer a definitive coverage of the literature and includes a new introductory essay by the editor, surveying the field and providing an integrative link between the articles and papers that are included. Comprehensive in coverage, these volumes will be an essential reference source for both psychologists, sociologists, and anthropologists concerned with gender studies in the behavioural sciences.
